Android google login loop

The status is not open for further response. Galaxy Tab A. Purchased by previous Next Ranking votes. Set with incorrect google account. Reset factory steps. Restart. The new installation begins. Joins Wifi automatically. Google goes to the account screen. Regardless of gmail acct entered with the correct password, the unauthorized attempt to reset the device to the factory continues to loop back to re-enter the screen indicating that you enter gmail and pwd synced earlier. Gmail input and pwd are endless loops. Resets can't get rid of google account information often (not factory resets). Hard reset required. Or you can try this NOTE: To do this, you must first enter the old account information and pass this screen login issue. Then use the following information. Try this to change your Google Account on your device. Without having to perform Factory Reset or Hard Reset. 1. Go to your tablet's Settings. 2. Swipe to find it now, and then tap Apps or Apps. 3. Swipe left/right to find the All tab on the Apps screen and tap. 4. Now scroll down the list (which can be quite long) and tap Google Appsa. 5. Once on this new screen, clear the data and then tap OK. 6. Then clear cache, and then tap OK. Note: Only one or the other of your tablet may be listed, that's fine. Also, when having both, it can be the gray of the other after touching the first, which is fine. 7. After doing this, return to the main Settings menu. 8. Find Scrolling and Data Synchronization. 9. The tablet will ask you to enter your new Gmail Account information. If you don't have Data Sync, you can restart your tablet and be prompted to enter new Google Account information. Have you tried adding the other account as a second account? If he's going to let that happen... (A reset didn't get rid of it, maybe not reset it?) Unfortunately, I am not locked all the way ... no way to get to settings or anything else. Let it be sorted. Thank you for that answer. If this problem occurs, it will definitely record these steps. Have you tried adding the other account as a second account? If he's going to let that happen... (A reset didn't get rid of it, maybe not reset it?) which is still if endless cycles don't work ... Any suggestion on my HTC 10 we will be very happy that this had exactly the same problem. FACTORY Reset. Unless you like to start over. This worked for me: in the phone settings > Delete all accounts then add your account. The status is not open for further response. W Solved! Google apps and games update wont... He won't accept mine. What to do with Android Tablets 2 February 2014 I change my PW to google on computer. I sent it to the phone (LG G3)- States that I tried to access google play and signed in due to the account change, I added PW, hit next, brings my email or adds an account on the next page. I clicked OK, which I clicked on my account, then it says check and we restart the same process. I restarted the phone. He took out the battery, waited 5 minutes and restarted the phone... I cleared the cache, demanded that the game store be forcibly stopped. I put a bad PW to see if there is a change jar - when you do it says PW error, and it seems to work correctly, but Google apps don't open. I tried to log in instead of gmail, same thing, and put PW and go back to the home screen on the phone after the arrow hit. 02-03-2016 22:25 1 Like 1 I have the same problem, Googles must finally be going wrong something?! Annoying. Sweet baby Jesus give me strength 02-03-2016 22:30 I have problem like 0. I changed my Google password and then couldn't enter my mobile phone (Huawei Nexus 6P). I continued to receive this message: A change in your account requires you to sign in again. In the end I reset the mobile phone for the default configuration & it made me re-enter passwords for a lot of apps but it worked. Partly: I have the same problem for my tablet, Samsung Galaxy Tab S with Android 5.0.2. I couldn't figure out what to do with it. I don't want to reset it either ... This smells like a serious bug. I know this because I can enter Gmail via browser with new password and see new emails there. But I can't use the Google Gmail app because it sends me a message about a change in your account. As of 02-04-2016 09:13 0 I have the same problem, I have not used the Galaxy 8 S 8.4 tablet for a while. Entering Google play Shows that a change in your account requires you to sign in again. If I enter the wrong password, he'll complain. If I enter the correct password to advance to a pop-up window that prompts me to use my account or add a new account. After accepting my account, a change to your Account requires you to sign in again returns and the process repeats. I've been required to stop Google Play and clear data, but that doesn't solve the problem. 02-04-2016 02-04-2016 Like 0 à nexus 6 is the same problem here after trying to verify 2 steps. Each time the text came in, it caused the authentication application to be lost and reset and require new code. My computer is 2 steps off and the same account action on my phone is stuck in the required loop.
